General rules

Our logo is a badge that represents us. It forms part of our brand, but is not our brand.

Our brand is how someone thinks and feels about us. It's an emotion shaped by experience and interactions they have with us at any level. Our promise, personality, values and visuals help shape this.

Making it possible to have a place you're proud to call home

This is our promise, it tells customers what they can expect from us and describes the experience we will deliver. It's what we stand for above all else. It guides absolutely everything we do.

Brand-mark

A direct visual representation of our promise, a heart for proud combined with home.

Look a little closer, and you'll notice that the two form a continuous loop. This represents our push to build more homes and provide great places to live, places our customers are proud to call home.

The top of the heart shape has been angled to mimic the pitch of roofs along a street, another nod to our push for building more homes and great communities. And a final nod to home building, you'll notice that the central home shape sits within another home.

Going back to the heart for a moment, as well as representing proud from our promise, it also represents that fact that we care deeply about our customers, communities and people. We really are passionate about housing and tackling the shortage of affordable homes in Yorkshire, making a real difference to people's lives.

Logo placement

The logo placement depends on the type of communication and use.

Top left

For communications such as call-to-actions and websites, as well as formal applications such reports, logo should be top left of the composition.

Bottom left

For communications where the message is more important than who it's from, logo should be placed bottom left of the composition.

Centred

For communications that use our logo in isolation and includes no text on the composition, like video graphics, logo can be placed centred.

Our logo should never be aligned to the right. Ever.

Typography

Bold and friendly, but also smart and easy to read.

Source Sans Pro

Source Sans Pro is an open-source sans serif typeface created for legibility. Its slender but open letters offer a clean and friendly simplicity with a conversational straight-talking personality.

We use this as body and headline copy on documents our colleagues create, things like Word, PowerPoint and Outlook. Also used within email campaigns.

FS Elliot

FS Elliot is an enduring typeface and is what our logo word-mark is based on. Its clear fluid shapes lend words a friendly, distinctive and optimistic bounce.

Only our design and communications team use this as headline and call to action text on our graphics and marketing material.
